Mrs. Ernest E. Long, 17 Lytton Blvd. <sup>X1011</sup> Toronto, Ont., M4R 1K9, gives us additional information about her Huguenot ancestors, besides what we published before, which was taken from the family Bible and oral tradition, as someone not interested in genealogy had destroyed all the family papers. (We get very annoyed with people who do things like that. Even if they are not interested themselves, these things would be of great value to future genealogists and historians. The same goes for old family pictures.)

The information she has now comes from a typescript volume, "Whetlock and Others" by her aunt, Grace L. Brush, Brooklyn, N.Y., 1930, and it may be found at the Institute of American Genealogy, Chicago, Ill., and at the National Headquarters of the D.A.R.

At the time of the Huguenot persecutions, the ancestors of Daniel Fanshaw crossed to England. It is said that Daniel's grandfather, Thomas Fanshaw was a Huguenot pastor and that when he left France, he waited to see that all his parishioners who were fleeing to England with him were on board the ship before he got on, and then leaped aboard as the vessel was being pushed off.

Daniel Fanshaw (born Aug. 22, 1788) was the son of William Henry Fanshaw and his wife Mary French. At the age of 15 he came to New York from England in 1803. He married Rebecca Melaine Ramage, May 19, 1810 and they had eight children, the fifth of whom was Mrs. Long's great grandmother. Rebecca Smith Fanshaw (Feb. 19, 1819 - Dec. 21, 1869) married William S. Whitlock (Nov. 1, 1837). Their daughter Eliza T. married Clinton E. Boush and they were the parents of Mrs. Long's mother, Rebecca Whitlock. She married George B. Toye of Toronto and they moved to Toronto where Mrs. Long was born.
