Hello James,

Great news-- that census where William reports he was born in Saratoga County!!
Just the kind of clue --reinforcement you needed.

Sorry taking so long to get back to you from your letter of July 7. I had to re-read that information over again. It seems from that other letter that you interpret the information [sent with the July 7 letter] to mean that Aaron is not the son of William. I did not see anything that proved it one way or the other...not sure what I may have missed in all that info, but didn't see that, so I wouldn't give up yet, especially with that latest tidbit about William born in Saratoga County. Anyway, I tried to find some addresses for this Robert Whitlock that may have a bible, and will enclose a list of possibilities.

One thing to always remember is that 'lack' of information does not mean something didn't happen. All events weren't always recorded, or info handed down....just have to keep looking, until a preponderance of clues leads you to a conclusion.

After I got your more recent note of July 27th I did a little more digging.

I will enclose a [bad] copy of the 1800 census for Milton. Henry Whitlock {Sr} is listed with , it appears, 4 boys and 1 girl in the household. We already have the boys names of Aaron, David, Henry Jr, and Charles, but no info on this girl who is 'under 10' on the census.

From the info in your forwarded notes, it seems Henry Jr. died young, and his brother Aaron raised his children. But Henry Jr's sons names were Charles, Stephen & James. No mention of a William. Aaron took Charles & Stephen, and Valentine Rathbun took James. We already knew there was a family connection with the Rathbuns, but this info tells us nothing about a William.

>>We do know Aaron was married to an Anna, per the cemetary records, and that she died young, and that he had to have had a 2nd wife. This Anna is buried in a cemetary with Rathbuns. This Anna dying so young, most likely cause would be childbirth. That questions still remains...child's name, William?? and who raised the child? If that theory is correct, that 1st child just may not appear with other family records, ie the family of the 2nd marriage, and the marriages were somewhat apart, with the probable 1st child slightly older and perhaps living with other relatives ,by the time Aaron's 2nd marriage.

[As mentionnd before, some question of dates as the marriage was supposedly 1809]

>> This wife Anna was a Rathbun/Rathbone per this record in the LDS files. For this marriage record I have included the info with the film number and how to contact a family history center if they can get you a copy of what was filmed.

>> Aaron Whitlock has another marriage reference @LDS on the same film as the 1st, several years later, also to a Rathbun girl. Sally could be a nickname for Sarah. Looks like those marriages occurred before & after that war of 1812.

>>The 2 Rathbun girls that Aaron married could have been sisters, or cousins---the daughters of Daniel Rathbun/Ann Redington or Valentine Rathbun/Love Redington. We know Daniel had a daughter Anna, we dont know whether Valentine did or not. We have info that Valentine had a daughter Sally, and that Daniel did not [see enclosed Rathbone info] LDS records:

>>I am enclosing some info from a Rathbone family history [WFT Vol 15, Tree 2678] This person did not have any info on Valentine's descendants, so not much help, but there is a lot of background info from which you may get clues. I didnt read it all, gleaned the Rathbones were Baptist.

> Also enclosed: A geneology submitted by James Whitlock [WFT Vol 8 Tree 3710 see below] that I picked up at Genealogy.com He is a descendant of Henry Jr via.... Henry Jr >James > John >Nate > Harold >James

This is the person that wrote to you...from this report it appears he didn't have all the info as he didnt have the names of Henry Jr's parents in his file { Henry Whitlock Sr & Ann Couch}, so therefore assuming he didnt have the names of Henry's siblings etc.?, but you never know.

The Submitter for Volume 8, Tree 3710 provided the following contact address:

>> Tried to find the Robert Whitlock [near Albany} that has that family bible, only found these 2 Robert listings; have included some others in the 'general' area also.

>> Lastly I am enclosing some info from Putnam geneology. Only sending a couple pages that refer to those 2 Whitlocks that married into the Putnams --believe some historian mentioned them to you. He doesnt seem to have much info on the Whitlocks, but may have some other clues of where to look. I didnt print the whole report on the Putnames [its 130 pages] if you contact him, perhaps he can sort out just those descendants from the info on the descendants of the 2 that married the Whitlocks.

It is from this website.

I have to agree with that one person who mentioned it was surprizing that there was so little information about Aaron Whitlock published. Someone has the info, some descendant somewhere....and thats what you have to keep searching for, another desendant of Aaron.

Best to you & yours,
