to "normal".The pictures attached are from Oct. 2005, a large building in Belle Plaine was set on fire. I was on my way back from Minneapolis and heard about it on the radio, just happened to have a camera with me. The building was located 100 Main St. for you that know, this building was located across the street to the North and West of Mary Sherwin Whitlock's home.I hope to see all of you at the family reunion July 2006 in Wisconsin. God Bless you all.jw

Jim,

Thanks for the historical update and the opportunity to voice my first blog.

With this picture I morn the passing of "Porky's Place" a small but popular bar across the street from Mary's Home. I remember many days when I would sit with Mary on the bent-wood porch swing while she'd name each person who came in and out of Porky's. Some would wave. It was run, of course, by Porky who was porky. I never met him but he was a swarthy and seemingly gregarious man of average height with curly reddish hair and rolled-up sleeves. Porky's was quite a gathering place during "Corn on the Curb Days" each August. Katie (our sister) might remember more about this. She would also sit on the swing with Mary and me.

Now, I have the bent-wood porch swing and matching rocker on my own front porch overlooking 10 acres of oaks, deer and wild turkeys. Gone are the amusing days of gently swinging in the August humidity directly across from a bar.

I suppose that Porky is long passed as well as is his bar; gone to the same place as Dugal's bar where Dad (Donald/Sam) used to describe the all male atmosphere, heavy smoke, raucous laughter and built-in gutter type urinals right under the bar (we've lost some quality in this digital age!).

I'm fascinated by the things that have captured my permanent memory from childhood. The ironic thing is that as I age, I may no longer remember my children, where I live or to zip my fly but will probably remember Porky's and my father's description of Dugal's (from his childhood memory also).

Thanks Jim for memory jog. I hope we might hear from others.

Seeing the house that I think of as Aunt Mary's house, filled me with a sad nostalgia. I remember going to visit her and the butter scotch candies in her red candy jar. I remember also the way she loved us without condition; and her quiet, curious ways.
