John W. Whitlock, the subject of this memoir, was born on a farm in Montgomery county, Ohio, some fifteen miles west of Dayton, January 4, 1839; and, at the time of his death, which occurred in Coffeen, Illinois, Saturday morning, September 7, 1912, was in his seventy-fourth year. He was the fifth child in a family of six sons and one daughter.

His father Elias Whitlock, born in Trenton, New Jersey, and his mother Mary (Johnson) Whitlock, a native of the state of Delaware, came into Ohio at a very early date in the history of the state, settling in the unbroken forest, where by hard work, the closest economy, and the simplest habits of living, they literally carved out for themselves and their family a comfortable home and a fair competency.

Both parents were endowed with a fair measure of those sterling qualities and resolute purposes, which always makes for industry and probity, and they infused into their children some degree of these traits which account for the building up in our country of great and permanent civilization.

To some extent Mr. Whitlock embodied in his own life and character these necessary and noble qualities, which he sought to exemplify as a neighbor and citizen of this town.

The parents of Mr. Whitlock both reached a good ripe age, the father dying in 1880 and the mother in 1883.

Both of them were life-long members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the home they maintained for so many years, was the scene and witness of the daily observance of those duties and obligations which the religion of our Lord Jesus Christ, has universally enjoined upon parental responsibility.

Three of Mr. Whitlock's brothers, Isaac J. for many years a prominent citizen of Piqua, Ohio; Wm. F. for fifty-one years a member of the faculty of the Ohio Wesleyan University and for a time the acting president of the University; and Arthur O. who, for forty-five years lived in this vicinity, a member of this church and widely respected as a citizen of the community; and Mrs. Sarah (Whitlock) Young, cherished and loved as the only sister, have preceded our friend and brother to the other and better world. Two of his brothers, Stephen H. Whitlock, a member of the Illinois conference and a resident of Charleston, Ill., and E. D. Whitlock, a member of the Central Ohio Conference and a resident of Toledo, Ohio, are the only ones left of a large family.

They were both able to be present during the last illness of their brother and are present here to-day to bid farewell to a brother beloved.

Mr. Whitlock was married three times, first, to Miss Emma Fiet, of Brookville, Ohio.

Of this union there were born three daughters and three sons; Lizzie, the wife of Mr. W. H. Snyder, of Coffeen; Mary who died at the age of five years, and Maggie who died in infancy.

Two of the three sons Orvis and Charles died in early manhood, and only six weeks apart, while Wood survives and is a resident of Coffeen.

His second marriage was with Miss Lydia A. DeNormande, of New Castle, Penn.; and his third, with Mrs. Rilla Crews, of Denver, Colorado.

All of these marriages were with women competent to grace any home, women of noble character and berhood and society that such views and such qualities have come to be known.

Mr. Whitlock was in the most emphatic sense a patriot. He believed in his country, in her flag, and in all those institutions, civil and religious, by which peoples are made great and by which great peoples make great governments.

Very early in life when but about sixteen years of age, during the Fremont-Buchanan campaign in 1856, he espoused the cause of universal freedom, and allied himself politically with those influences and forces, which as he saw them gave promise of a rule in the nation more humane and democratic; forces which seemed most disposed or calculated to promote those principles of free government, which since that time have been realized in the history and experience of the people. In the fall of 1862 he enlisted in the 15th Regulars, U. S. I., and in the battle at Pittsburg Landing the following spring, his first and only battle during the war, he fell severely wounded, and then by the injury sustained and a disease contracted doubtless laid the foundations for the sickness that ensued in his death.

But it was perhaps, in the religious life and the Christian ministry that he exercised his largest influence and achieved the greatest good.

His Christian experience and service covered the greater part of the latter half of his life. Whether from the lack of a settled judgment concerning the tenets of religion, or because of his attachment to the forms of the world that he did not assume the obligations of the Christian life sooner it is not known to in life and service, in joy and sorrow. . At times he had remarkable power in prayer. He seemed to be carried up and away among the heights of God, when like Moses of old, he could talk with Jehovah. At such times his congregations were inspired, caught up, and made to feel, with a thrill of interest, the presence of the great "I am." No wonder then when his pains were constant and his sufferings intense, when knowing that his afflictions had baffled all care and skill of physicians, and when weeping and broken hearts stood by, in dread of the final dissolution, that he was serene that he could calmly and triumphantly say: "There is no shadow." To him all was clear and into the opening heavens and to the bosom of God this soldier and saint took his flight.

Rev. E. D. Whitlock.
